In a recently-published book dealing with the industrial developments in England in the eighteenth century, it is recorded that at the beginning of the century English industry was carried on under medieval year. It is expected that the construction of conditions : at the end of it the conditions | the Kiaochon-Ichou Line will be taken in hand were almost those which now prevail. China in this respect has this advantage over the Great Britain of a contury ago: mechanical power was then in its infancy; for China there are available mechanical appliances which have been brought by Western science and ingenuity to the highest pitch of perfection, and on that account more rapid advancement is possible if the inclination or rather the as we believe it does. ### MONDAY'S ORCHESTRAL CONCERT

The Bank Holiday programme given at the Theatre Royal by the famous Orchestra of the Gorman Cruiser Squadron, assisted by Mr. E. Danenberg, the well-known planist, and his very promising pupil, Miss Esther Xavier, was of a very varied character, classical, operatic and popular composers being represented. It opened with Wagner's "Rienzi" introduction, followed by Mendelssohn's "Return from Abroad overture. Both these works the Orchestra played with exquisite sympathy. Accompanied by the Orchestra, Horr Klahn gave a beautiful rendering of Schumann's (a) "Traumerie," after which the Orchestra played Mendeleschn's "Spring Song" with poetical charm, the applause being so enthusiastic that the item had to courage, discretion and good sense are be repeated. An interesting item was F. Liszt's believed to have largely contributed to the Concerto No. 1 for Piano and Orchestra, wellknown for its extreme technical difficulties. All these Mr. Danenborg overcame with great facility and interpreted the Concerto in the true Liezt spirit.

In the second part the music was much lighter, with the exception of Chopin's "Rondo" for two pianes, played very finely by Mr. Danenberg and Miss Esther Xavier, who has talent of a very high order. She played Chopin's lovely "Nocturue" as an encore, and her interpretation of it was astonishing for her age. The other pieces played by the Orchestra were Gounod's "Faust" fantasie, a Selection from Lehar's "Count of Luxemburg," and, the prettiest of all; Koedel's Christmas Time, a work depicting the various Christmas scenes. Herr Richter as usual conducted well throughout, keeping the Orchestra always under perfect control.

RUBBER. HOPEFUL SENTIMENT AS TO TUTURE DEVELOPMENTS.

The special representative of the London Evening Standard writing on the 26th ult.

The situation has undergone no marked change, but there none the less exists a pretty hopeful sentiment as to the future trade de-

Meanwhile holde s of the raw product and those interested in plantation rubber shares seem satisfied with the maintenance of stability in market conditions since the general improvement which has taken place recently. So many have been their disappointments during the dull season that they wisely do not look for any startling developments, at any rate this side of the New Year, though they are confident consuming trades. The condition of these has been to some extent dislocated by the higher prices which had to be charged for rubber goods the result of his investigation, and it was decid- when crude rubber rose beyond 12s, a lb. Since then there has been some readjustment of selling prices by manufacturers, but there is reductance apparent to proceed with further revision lest materially.

The opinion gains ground that the product will probably see higher prices, possibly up to 8s. a lb., when the buying season is in full swing, and American consumers start replenishing their stocks on a basis more commensurate with their needs. 'At the same time there are people who rather take the view that a fall to 5s. or so is to be anticipated in the spring. This seems, however, to be unduly pessimistic. At all events, much depends on the extent to which the world's requirements develope and to the growth of output from the plantations in the Middle East. Unsold stock, it is true, have accumulated somewhat during the spell of depression, but this, after all, does not amount to very much, when it is remembered that supplies in consumers' hands have also run very low. The replenishment process on a rallying market will perhaps constitute one of the most important factors in the regulation of prices in the near future, and there is just a possibility that unsold stocks may be drawn upon this season to a notable extent.

THE STRAITS FREIGHTS BILL.

OPERATION OF THE MEASURE SUSPENDED IN THE COLONY.

The Legislative Council of the Straits Settlements met on the 17th inst. for the purpose of considering a motion exempting from the lay it before the meeting in catence. He operation of the Freight and Steamship Bill | 1910, all the Settlements of the Colony.

in the following terms-"That this Council far as the Government was concerned they had exempts from the operation of the Freight and | consistently endeavoured to reach an agreement Steamship Ordinance, 1910, all the Settlements and had no desire to cause such a tremendous of the Colony "-Mr. Evans said the bill was duly transmitted to the Secretary of State to be have resulted in the bringing into force of the "laid before the King, but up to the present no ordinance. If they had succeeded at least in intimation had been received that His Majesty getting the other side to agree to discuss the approved of or disallowed it, or had given any question on the basis they knew they agere further directions upon it. A memorandum by prepared to discuss it he thought they and his Excellency [reproduced below] set out in some detail the steps which led to the present situation; but it was perhaps convenient to briefly refer to those steps now. From the very first conception of the bill, his Excellency had expressed the hope that it would never be necessary to bring it into operation, but that the persons against whom it was directed would appreciate that Government was determined to put a stop to the objectionable. combination of shipowners and shippers, and that these persons would in consequence make other arrangements by which the necessity for the ordinance would be obviated, Government principals, to ascertain what rates of freight objected to the agreement between shipowners from the Colony were unduly high and my and shippers, by which the latter were bound grounds for that opinion. I informed them to support the former in keeping up freight that I was not prepared to discuss rates of freight to do. rates. It also objected to five per cent. on on individual articles. I agreed in the views exfreights levied upon all and divided amongst a pressed by the deputation that it was no part of few. CONFERENCE IN LONDON.

If the conference was prepared to amend its agreements, and regulations on these lines, the Government felt that it would attain the object it set out to accomplish, and the merchants of. the Colony would have a free hand to ship their produce by conference steamers or any others. In pursuance of this object, Government had held interviews with representatives of the conference out here and had endeavoured to their principals and informed them that we inarrange a basis upon which negotiations might | tended to proceed with the Bill and that the be entered into between Government and the next more lay with them. On receiving the conference. The result had been forwarded to the full report of the proceedings at the interview conference managers at home and to the Colonial with Lord Crowe, I wrote to his Lordship ex Office, the result being that subject to this basis: plaining at length the policy of the Government Government was prepared at the desire of the conference to enter into negotiations. The the leader of the deputation explaining th political situation at home had doubtless interfored with a speedy decision, but do snything to bring about an honourable and on Thursday last Government received lasting settlement which would give producers, from the Secretary of State intimation that merchants and shippers all a fair chance, no the conference was prepared to consider the one would be more pleased than myself. I reabolition of this 5 per cent. special commission in future agreements, and to negotiate generally of the terms of my letter, to have it forwarded on the situation if the Governor could arrange to Sir James Mackay, and he informed me that to see them for that purpose. His Excellency he did approve and had sent the letter on. had made arrangements for a short visit to England and with the approval of the Secretary of State had decided to accept the conference suggestion, it now became necessary to execupt the Colony for the time from the operation of the ordinance. No doubt many would blame the Government and toll it that, notwithstanding its fine words, it was after all afraid of the conference and was climbing down. He was not prepared to admit Government was afraid, but he would admit that Government would prefer to see a friendly arrangement by which the Colony would still have the assistance of the splendid I would prefer the former, but that the fleet of steamers now colling here, while agreement with the merchants to sid in main. It is a question, then, whether the privilege of at the same time there would be sufficient rough, cheap cargo to attract to the wharves many steamers which are now daily passing our gates because there is nothing for them if they call. Government did not wish to drive away the conference ships, because it recognised that they provided a first-class service of steamers and were invaluable to the trade of the Colony. But, Mr. Evans added, we will not allow them to take possession of our ports and to cry hands off to any steamer outside their own ring, which may venture to approach the port. The ports of this Colony are free ports, and this Govern ment is determined that they shall be really free, and that every steamer which desires to come in shall be welcome and that every merchant shall be free to ship his produce by any steamer, or in any way which he thinks fit without dictation from anyone.

Mr. Saunders seconded the motion. Dr. Galloway hailed the resolution with grave regret, because it fell far short of the aims of the Bill. He could only express the hope that any concessions made would be small. It was reported that there had been a certain amount of disturbance in shipping business, which would What steps had the Government taken to protect shippers under these circumstances? At present all the onus res'ed with the conference.

THE GOVERNOR REPLIES.

The Governor said that Dr. Galloway practically declared that Government was giving away the object for which the bill was introduced. All his Excellency could say was that as far as Government was concerned, they had not given away one jot or tittle of the object. The object of Government throughout had been, not one of implacable hostility to conferences but an implacable hostility to the conference as it existed in this Colony, In that, Government had the unanimous support and declaration of the Royal Commission which considered the question of conferences in England. The object which Government set out to secure was to put an end to the agreement between merchants and shipowners under which merchants bound themselves not to encourage shipping competition with the conference; bound themselves to assist the conference in maintaining freights; and, in consideration a moment have interfered with. Nor did they dream of attempting to forbid or interfere with any aspecment by which a large shipper should receive, in consideration of the amount of his shipments, special discounts or relates. Dr. Galloway said they had no guarantee that the conference would not refuse to take cargo after January 1. They had no reason to believe they would do so when they received the announcement that the bill was suspended. They took it that the conference, as honourable men, would not take any persistent step which would render any negotiations with them impossible. He did not know that they should ask for any further guarantee. There was scarcely time, but he thought they might take it that the conference were prepared to do what was indispensable, viz., to leave matters in the status que until negotiations had either succeeded or failed. He was corry that as regarded the correspondence referred to in the memorandum most of it had been under confidential cover, and therefore he was not in a position to thought that a fairly full summary of it had been given, and he hoped it was sufficient to Introducing the motion, which was conched enable members and the public to see that so dislocation of the trade of the port as would accomplished something and, at any rate, if they had not accomplished it, all they wanted would be another resolution of the Conneil which would put them in exactly the same position as they were in yesterday.

THE GOVERNOR'S MEMORANDUM.

The resolution was then put and carried.

The existing agreement between merchants an | shipowners was a barrier to that and the Government desired to put on end to it and to the tax of 5 per cent, on freights which it levied. I requested them to communicate our views to and at the same time wrote a letter to position to him, and saying that if he could quested the Secretary of State, if he approved

REFUSALS OF CARGO.

After the ordinance had been passed and sent home by the mail of November 5, I telegraphed to the Secretary of State that the ordinance had been sent, urging an early decision, as the shipowners were, I understood, refusing to book cargo beyond December 31. At the same time. I repeated my readiness to negotiate on the basis of either a list of articles to which the rebate system might apply, or of a list of articles to which it should not apply, though taining freights and the special tax must be sending deep-hordered badges of wee through the terminated, though I had no objection to special discounts to large shippers on their own shipments. Having heard from a private source that the Colonial Office had been approached with a view to negotiation, I telegraphed again on November 7, repenting my readiness to, negotiate, and that if I could be granted leave next year I would go home for the purpose.

SECRETARY OF STATE'S ADVICE. I have now received a message from the Secretary of State informing me that the conference state that they are of opinion that while there may be no difficulty as regards the special commission to the merchants being disallowed in any future agreement, beyond this expression of their views they are not prepared to bind themselves beforehand as to the details of any future conference arrangements, and that they are willing to discuss the situation with me. The Secretary of State adds that he does not regard the answer as very satisfactory, but if I concurred it might be desirable to suspend the ordinance for six months and that I should proceed to England to negotiate with the conference. I have replied that I concur and that I would bring the question of suspension before a meeting of the Council on the 17th instant, and would arrive in England early in May next. 1 added that I presumed that the shipowners would withdraw their orders to refuse to book

Possibly they might proceed to Aden before they are placed in barges, as they could easily Sir Edward Sassoon in support of his bill for manage the Red Sea voyage, but there is the the compulsory adoption of wireless by British consideration of apparatus at this scantily shipping. HOW TO LIVE LONG.

Mr. John Bigelow, author and diplomat, who was the United States Minister to France during the Second Empire, has just celebrated his ninety-fourth birthday. To a Mail representative he has given the following recipe for longevity: "Live cleanly and healthfully Drop irksome business when you begin to feel its cares. Don't allow it to sap your youth. realised forty-five years ago, before I was fifty, that it was time for me to retire from acti business, and so I retired—that is, I made business of performing only such labours as were pleasing to me. The result is I conserved my nervous force, vitality, and brain power.

THE HAND LOSING ITS CUNNING. We learn through a French paper that we are in danger of losing the use of our hands. The assertion is made by a medical authority, and a little reflection will lead us to pause before scouting this theory. Our hands in effect become less canning and adroit through our availing ourselves of every mechanical appliance at our disposal. In times past women were skilful embroiderers and workers of lace, but the sewing machine has deteriorated the work of the hands and fingers, because, in the case of the mercenary worker, it renders a better return for her labour. By degrees the hands become stubborn, and in time, says the authority before cited there will be nothing for the ten fingers

A DIVINE'S PARROT. The late Dr. Maceregor, of St. Cuthbert's, Edinburgh, whose death occurred a few days ago, had a favourite parrot, a brilliant linguist and remarkably "quick study." As he was going into the country for a month Dr. Macgregor arranged with a friend who had a parrot take charge of his pet. He ordered his beadle to carry the cage to the hird's new abode. It was a wet and stormy night, and the beadle grambled to himself in language unbecoming a minister's man, while the parrot listened. So when he was set down in the parlour of a saintly lady, and the cover removed, the bird addressed himself directly to the other parrot - "Ye d-d ugly beast, if it wasna for you I widne has been cot the nicht."

WARMING THE DEVIL. An almost incredible case of superstition is reported from Ribal, near Grosswardein, Hungary (says the Vienna correspondent of the Leader). The place for the first time recently experienced an earthquake, a series of violent shocks shook the neighbourhood, some being so violent that the church bells rang. The villagers were greatly alarmed, and consulted an woman quack of the place, who declared that the shocks were the groans of the 'evil, who suffered cold and hunger. Thereupon the peasants throw a number of calves and goats into a chasm outside the village to appears the devil's hunger and set fire to the bishop's forest in the neighbourhood to provide I im with warmth. The quack and several peasants have been arrested. A DEPRESSING CUSTOM.

What right have people (asks an American contemporary) to inflict their personal griefs apon friends? Is it right or in good taste for those who have buried their relatives to go about trailing their mourning emblems through thoroughfares which, without their depressing presence, would be gay? Do not the deep-bordered mourning cards and stationery adopted by bereaved families indicate valgarity? It has long been known to physicians and psychologists that colour has its distinct effect upon the nervous organisation of every living creature. A patient suffering from a nervous disorder would never be permitted to play with mourning cards Government mails should not be prohibited by law as a public nuisance.

CRIME IN THE BRITISH NAVY. A White Paper just issued shows that during 1909 106 seamen of the Royal Navy were tried by Court-martial. Seventy-two of the offences consisted in striking and attempting to strike a superior officer, while 26 were cases of theft. and embezzlement. The total number of sentences was 96, of which 46 were of imprisonment and dismissal, with or without disgrace; and 48 imprisonment with or without hard labour During the period under notice the total number of summary punishments was 116,342, of which 107,043 were minor punishments. In 31 cases men were dismissed from Service, in 2.616 cases imprisonment was the sentence, in 6,499 cases the delinquents were placed in the cells, and disrating occurred in 753 cases. So, for as Royal Marines on shore are concorned, there were 37 Court-martial, and in 36 cases sentences were awarded. 12 for desertion, 13 for violence to superiors and insubordination, and 11 for making away with necessaries. It is stated that the number of Court-martials in the case of seamen and Royal Marines affoat is lower this year than that for any period since 1898, and since 1906 there has been a steady decline. The follows:cases of mutiny, however, were fewer, while the number of summary punishments is also less.

Possibly it is a consideration of the circumstances attending the breakdown of the Austrian-Lloyd liner Triests in the Indian Ocean which has led to this decision. This very incident, it may be remembered, was cited by

At present, however, craft, it may be considered that a few of the first | the attitude of the Board of Trade appears to be that wireless telegraph is extending so rapidly that there is no need for compulsion.

GERMANY'S, PHENOMENAL DEVELOPMENT.

SPEECH BY HERR DELBRUCK.

Berlin, November 25.

For three days the Reichstag has debated regard to the interpollation of the Socialis Party, which asked what steps the Chancellor intended to take in view of the alleged scarcity of ment in the Empire. The subject has been thoroughly threshed out in the newspapers, and but few new arguments have been brought forward.

Now, as heretofore, the Socialist and Democratic Parties contend that the mass of the people cannot obtain the meat necessary for their man. nourishment, and assert that the situation will be improved only if the Government will open the frontiers to foreign cattle. Now, as heretofore, the Government and the Parties on the Right declare that there is no need for alarm, and that the increased price of meat is due not to local causes but to ressons which prevail even in countries which pursue a Free Trade policy. The Government also contends that its duty is to watch over the health of the population, and that it would not be fulfilling this duty if it permitted live or slaughtered animals to be imported without thorough veterinary control.

The Secretary of State for the Interior, Dr. Delbrück, to-day delivered a long speech, in which he again defended the Government standpoint. In the first place, he said, the Imperial Health Office has issued a memorandum in which it is proved that the lower classes are not underfed, for there is sufficient meat in the country to furnish the average quantity per head required by the population. He also pointed out the nuwisdom of relying on other countries for ment, and stated that the export of cattle and meat by the United States, for example, which in 1900 was 10.6 of the total exports of that country, had sunk by 1909 to 5.9 per cent. With reference to the general agrarian policy of the German Empire, Dr. Delbrück stated that the price of rye was higher from 1851 to 1855 than it has been in any year since the introduction of Protective tariffs, and that the case of wheat was similar. He declared that the price of meat had risen mainly under the influence of the improvement in the manner of living, and pointed out that protection was accorded not only to agriculture but also to industry. Was it right, he added, to deduce from the fact that during the last thirty years the cost of production had increased that therefore the economic policy of the Empire was Herr Delbrück contended that results were the only means of proving whether a policy was right or wrong; and continued: "Can it be said that a country has pursued a wrong economic policy when its national wealth has increased during the last ten years by £500,000,000, when its population has increased in the same period by about 880,000 annually, and when its population. notwithstanding that enormous growth, has found remunerative work to such. degree that emigration has almost-ceased?... It is also untrue that only certain classes have benefited by this state of affairs, and l would remind you that this tariff and economic policy have enabled us to spend £20,000,000 up to the year 1907 in improving the social and political condition of our working classes, several millions of which came directly out of the pecket of the Empire." The Secretary of State also cited the wellknown social economist. Richard Calwer, who has calculated, as previously mentioned, that in the period from 1896 to 1910 wages have increased by 374 per cent., while the cost of living of the working class has increased only by 221 per cent. He also pointed out that, although the workman might now pay more for bread, meat, &c., it was not only the price of these articles that was higher, but that their quality was considerably enhanced. Herr Delbrück also quoted Herr Adolf Wogner, who has said: "No other people has advanced during the Nineteenth Century as we Germans have, and no other people new permits itself more luxuries of all kinds in all classes from the highest to the lowest, from the workman to the capitalist."

"It is thus futile," concluded Dr. Delbrück; "to advance general theoretic considerations against an economic policy that has so greatly advanced and benefited the German nation." H added that it would always be the endeavour of the Government to safeguard the united interests of the people as a whole.-From the Berlin correspondent of the London Post.

FOREIGN LOANS FOR CHINA.

The Peking Daily News of December 14 repor s:-The National Assembly met yesterday at 1.30 p.m. There were present one hundred and twenty five-members. Among the visitors were four foreigners and representatives The question of foreign loans contracted by the province of Kiangau for the express purpose of liquidating outstanding debts incurred during the recent financial crisis was discussed The Hon. Hsu Ting-lin said :- " It will be remembered the fluoricial crisis resultant from the rubber boom in the early part of the year has had far-reaching and disastrous effects on the business community. The amount incurred is stated to be above $30,000,000. His Excellency Chang has been instructed to proceed to Shanghai to arrange matters in order to restore confidence in the money market. The re-ult was the successful negoti tion of a foreign loan of $35,000,000. Now it appears that the people of Kiangsu unnecessarily have to accept a certain amount of responsibility for the payment of this loan. This I think is not right, inasmuch as it is a public affair and is not confined to any particular province.

The Hon. Wang Tso-liang said :- "In this connection I may cite another instance which the officials have made use of as an excuse for the purpose of raising money. The Industrial Taotai of Shantung, for instance, has obtained a loan from the Germans by saying that the money was used for the development of industry. This is extraordinary on thepart of the officials. In reply to a question a deputy of the Tuchipu said :- " I remember two losns have been contracted, one being for $35,000,000 and the other $3,000,000. These loans have nothing to do with the Tuchipu. His Excellency Vicercy

PEERS v. PEOPLE-IN ENGLAND.

The following interesting letter appears in The Times :-

Sir,-It will have been noticed that Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Winston Churchill both suggest that the present fight is "the Peers versus the People," and one of them has maintained that it means 45,000,00 people versus 6 0 Peers. In the circumstances I think it is very interesting to note the votes cast at the last General Election in England alone for and against the House of Lords. I am accepting the view taken by the Liberal Party that this was the issue at the last election : -

In England alone-Unionist .... Liberal .... Socialist ...

Total Anti-Unionist vote ... 2,648,129 Number of electors in uncontested constituen.

In Unionist constituencies... In Liberal constituencies ... 15,832 H. PIKE PEASE.

Liberal Union Club, Dec. 2. PS.—The figures are more remarkable in view of the fact that many of those voting for Labour candidates would upport the Unionist if no Labour candidate was in the field.

Thus there are many excuses to be made for the bad condition of agriculture in many parts has risen considerably in Japan, the depression of the Philippines: but these excuses only having moved away over the Pacific. partially explain the backwardness of the islands as a whole, for which there are other and deeper reasons. The crop which ranks second among Manchuria. the exports of the Philippines is, as has been said, sugar; and it would to difficult in any part of the world to find a considerable crop being produced in such slothful and extravagant over he China Sea. fashion as the Filipino uses in growing his sugar. It is ill-planted and badly grown; and so crude are the methods of extraction that it is said that on the average 60 per cent. of the juice is left in the megass, waste, while such sugar as is ultimately exported is of "the lowest degree of polarization known in commerce." It is hardly exaggeration to say that the most old-fashioned wind-power muscovado plant in Barbados is a marvel of efficiency compared to the crude methods generally employed by the Filipino sugar planter. The Spanish semi-feudal system, under which the peasant is little more than the serf of the cacique or local landholder, has through three centuries operated, on a people seemingly already indolent, to discourage thrift and laboriousness, and has destroyed the sense of independence or inclination to initiative in the people. Caciquism, practically unmodified, remains the general condition in agricultural districts; and how it can be other than an extremely slow and arduous process to breathe a new spirit into the people and revolutionize the existing order it is difficult to see.

The Cleve Lad gave vent to a piercing yell. said the father, taking a glass of Be logotine. "That will carry you far."

" y son," said his father, "there are com-Totable berths to be had by shouting for them. To careful to secure a good income. My son, while you shed tears for the poor remember to Teather your nest. I myself "-he paused here with a look of modest triumph-"I myself am what is called a Demayogue. It has paid ine very well. I make five thousand a year out of it. A glass of port?"

And now," said the Fond Parent. "I will give you a little instruction. Let me hear your views on the Aristocracy." The boy stood up and, placing one hand on his heart, began mildly: "T is ancient Institution of Hereditary Peers is losing a certain amount of its genuine usefulness."

The Benevolent Gentleman gasped. "Good Heavens," he cried. "That's no good. Listen tome. First assume a slightly humorous ex-pression, as if the whole subset was of no importance. Then lash yourself into a fury-make believe, of course. Listen to me, and observe my manner."

He stood up, tonsled his hair, and waved his arms. "Brothers," he cried, "what is this dirty old bag of tricks that stinks in the nostrils of every decent man? Golf playing, meter-carriding wasters of a nation's time. I have robbed them to fill your mouths. Down with everything that has the swollen pride of ances'ry and tradition. Down with Poetry, down with Good Manners, down with Breeding, Courtesy, Chivalry, and Country Houses, for these are the attributes of the blighted swines who pauperise our country to-day.

His son stood watching him amazed. "But, father," he said, " what does that me in ? "Mean," cried his father. "Do you expect It to monn anything?" His son was abashed. "Father," he said, "!

beg your pa don." Youth," said his father kindly, "I accept your apology. But you must learn."
But, father," said the Truthful Lad, " you play golf yourself, and you have a motor-car and a bones in the country, and yet—and yet the other side does not call you a waster." "My boy," said the Bonevolent Gentleman, "I merely say those things in order to wake up the worst instincts of the people. I do not reason with them; I stir them up." " ut, father," said the boy, "do you believe what you say P" The Successful Politician shook his head sadly, "I fear," he said, "that you have been well brought up. Yet I sent you to the worst Board School I could in order that you might hate those who went to better ones."

The Pruthful Child hung his head "Do you know any history?" said his father

The Lad humbly confessed that he did. "Ab. " said his father thoughtfully, "that is bad, yet not so bad. A elever distortion of historical facts has great influence sometimes, Tell me, what do you think of those who robbed and destroyed the monustories? "

"They did," said the boy proudly, " exactly what you are traing to do now to the estates of the landed gentry." Hush," cried his father, glancing foorfully at the door, "never speak the truth, my child. I will not do. Now let yourself ro. Speak un you might to one of your Board School friends who had done you a bad turn. Let me hear you.

The Obedient Boy thrust his head forward and put out his tongue. "You swab," he screamed, "you dirty dog. What do you mean by coming here with your swagger, you gutter

He pansed, exhausted, and his father rose again from his comfortable chair. " Excellent," he said, "I shall make an orator of you after all. That's the spirit, my lad. Let om have it. And now, my son, tell me what you think of the British workman."

"I think," said the Truthful Child, "that if he saved the money he spent in drink hold be better off when he was out of work." His father paled visibly. . "Terrible," he exclaimed, mopping his brow. "Truly terrible. Nover say that again if you want to get on. You must draw a picture of him oppressed by every evil of the other side. You must call him friend and brother, and invite him to throw stones at policemen and Peers. Never be weak my son; never see a fault in the man who? going to raise a rist. Tell them that you will give them all they ask. Tell them you will insure them against work."

"But father." said the boy, "what happens if you don't do what you promise P" The Benevolent Gentleman smiled. "Promise them something else," he said; "and if that doesn't do, shout, Down with Something. Encourage their conins for destruction. Lead the mob, my hoy, don't follow it. Believe in yourself and they will believe in you. They hate paying rent, so cry. Down with landlords. They hate knowing anyone is better than they are, so ory, Down with the Lords." "But, father," said the Irritating Chi'd, "you can't always be down with everything. you must be up with something sometimes. The father tapped his chest knowingly. "Up with me," he said. "I have a lot of snubs and cold shoulders to avenge, and I'm going to avenge them. I'll bit em on the raw. I'll catch 'em where they live. I'll make maty remarks about their matrimonial affairs and their private "Don't you like old institutions, father?" asked the Artless One. "Isn't there any good in things it has taken the wisdom of ages to build? Aren't any well-born people truthful or sincere, or capable?" His father gasped. "My dear, dear child." he said, "don't you know that I hate all these thinks like poison? I achor tradition, and I loathe anything above by understanding. Mind you, I have ideas, but as to the wisdom of ages -pouf! it's so much dry rot. This country is full of fine things, but they ere in my way. You must learn to be popular, my son. You must learn the secret of spreading discontent and of rousing wild natures.

"Strikes and Hunger Marches," murmured the Simple Child. "Tut 1" said his Fond Parent. "It is to 1 Tydeus, turn their attention away from these awkward things that I invented the cry of Down with Everything. If I had an axe," he muttered, appeal to the imagination," he answered. could do it just as well on the other side better, I think. They have all the advantages, all the things that Englishmen really love, the ancient home, the old rules and ceremonies, the carefully tended estates, all the things England has fought for, spent her children's blood to acquire. A Constitution bufft of brains and bravery. How well I could use all that for catch phrases. But I don't belong to the class," he said savagely, "so I have to fall back on my native wit. There, that is weakness. Now, my son, leave me to my second eigar, and learn these phrases I have written out for you, they will be useful, And remember my rule. If anyone asks you a serious question and you can't find a way out of it make fun of it, make fun of anything, get your laughs and your tears and you'll get your power. See here are the phrases. This cancer at the heart of England. The ancient glories crumbling to decay. If you can't get them to listen to you break their windows Are we to live at the mercy of a handful of hunting Squires?' There are plenty more there, my

"Thank you, father," said the boy, taking the paper and making his way to the door.

"That's right, my lad. And now when you grow up you will become a rich man." "Father," said the Ever Truthful One from the doorway. "I think I'd like to be a Con-
